As a flight attendent for an major carrier I think allowing passengers to use cellular technology in flight would pose several challenges to include assisting possible terrorist acts, aggrivation among passengers and possible lost of passenger attention during an emergency evacuation.